

The Mousehole

From early 1964 to about May, 1968 this coffee house at 106 Yorkville Ave, owned by Bernie Fiedler also of the Riverboat, was apparently first a coffee shop and second a venue for mainly folk music. It appears to have been Alan MacRae's home base; he certainly dominates this list, at any rate. The dates shown are those which can be confirmed by cross referencing posts in more than one reference where possible, but through 1965-66 music was offered most nights of the week. With the exception of 1965 and much of '66, the Mousehole wasn't advertised well in the daily newspapers, usually depending on posters and smaller publications like Satyrday magazine. In Klaas van Graft's words: musicians performed "Monday to Saturday in my time and a different performer on Sunday", so what's shown here should be viewed as the minimum any particular musician appeared. Still a reasonable measure of who was there.

Mickey Clark

Again from Klaas: "Mickey Clark, from Louisville, Kentucky, traveled Canada. A very good singer of ballads like Windigo. Took a wife and a straight job. Back after retirement he returned to the music scene, produced a fantastic album, died two years ago in Louisville. He contacted me a few years ago and sent me a CD of it. We have played it many times since."

They opened The Riverboat in December, 1964. While Fiedler has gone to the business end of the scale with The Riverboat, and takes regular trips to New York to look over the new talent, Patricia Fiedler has kept The Mousehole at the other end of the scale by keeping it primarily a coffee house, with entertainment mainly local and regarded as a sideline”.

Data collection

These listings are a composite of what appeared in the Toronto Telegram’s (the Tely) What’s Going On listing in the Showcase Section and the Chum About Town listings in the After Four Section (Feb 1964 - Feb 1965) augmented by electronic searches of the Toronto Star (Star) and Globe and Mail (G&M) archives from the 1960s on. Where I take words directly from a listing I use “quotation marks” and often italics to separate it from other text. Where I cite an article I reference the reporter if identified. Note the qualification in the introduction.

Note also as usual: these are only the musicians who were publicized in the daily press. Many others performed and risk going unrecognized except in memory. As usual, the spelling of artists names was variable in the press of the day, my apologies for mistakes not caught, corrections always welcome.
